2: General Overview of Learning Studies structure

Candidates taking the eLearning course need to be aware of the following:

- That the Learning Studies are a new component and provide candidates with the chance to apply their knowledge through a series of 18 scenario-based questions. A minimum of 10 exercises need to be covered
- The Learning Studies are a form of problem-based learning and require candidates to select the correct answer from a range of four possible answer options
- There is a maximum of five points per question, with the most correct, or best answer scoring 5 points, the second-best answer scoring 3 points, the third best answer scoring 1 point and the distracter scoring zero points
- To be able to answer the question, the candidate will need to:
 - Review the common case study
 - Assess the information in the scenario
 - Refer to the guidance in the TOGAF Standard.
- The Learning Studies are a mandatory exercise and successful completion of the Learning Studies will mean candidates are eligible for the Applied Practitioner Badge
- The process to follow in order to:
 - Submit their answers to the Learning Studies questions
 - Receive feedback from a ATC

We advise candidates to rank the order of their answers from the best (correct) answer through to the worst answer, when submitting their responses to the ATC.
